

PAY AND ACTION LATEST

Further to the information provided to you earlier this week where you advised that the States Employment Board (SEB) had come back to the table for further discussions on the pay offer, an improved offer has been made. However, the discussions are continuing, as the NASUWT believes that more progress needs to be made.

In order to facilitate these further discussions on Monday of next week, and to maximise the opportunity for further improvements, the NASUWT has agreed to suspend the day of strike action planned for Tuesday 26th February.

The NASUWT is sure members will support the Union in taking all possible opportunities to seek to secure a negotiated settlement before proceeding with action. There is no doubt that the willingness of members to take strike action, and the notification of a date for industrial action, have focused the minds of the SEB and their negotiators.

However, even though the strike for next week has been suspended, and members should therefore work normally on Tuesday, members should be absolutely clear that the ballot for industrial action is still live, and if sufficient progress cannot be made, the States will face notice of further action.

Once we have confirmation of a further improved offer, we will seek feedback from members before any agreement is finalised.

Thank you for your continuing support and solidarity.
